

READING-A CONTINUOUS PROCESS TO DEVELOP WRITING SKILLS

M.RAMAPRIYA, DR.K.V. DIVYA

Abstract: It has been said that we cannot really teach language, we can only create conditions in which it will develop spontaneously in mind in its own way. Writing is an intricate and complex task; it is the most difficult of all the language abilities to acquire. Nowadays when Learning to communicate has become the principal object while studying a foreign language, each skill plays an important part. To have success a very important part is played by teaching language skills in a communicative way. The aim of this paper is to consider the importance of writing skills. Writing also enhances language acquisition; it develops critical thinking and helps the learners to express freely as in their mother tongue, using English for communicative purpose. An effective writing assignment can advance important course objectives. For improving writing skills reading can play as an important aspect. In this way it encourages students to learn actively. The goal is not simply read and write down a part but to develop into a higher level so as it continues the idea of what they read at communicative level.

Keywords: Language Teaching, complex task, writing skills, communicative level.

Introduction: Language is measured as the most extensive necessities of education and literacy. Its competence and guidelines arise with the mastery in acquiring creative skills. Predictably even today in the world, creative skills of language are given importance in which writing is the most effective result projected from students. This objective is acceptable in the colleges where the students are required to master good writing compositions.

Importance of Writing Skills: A person who is interested to learn a language thoroughly can focus on one of the concepts of ELT—Writing. Writing skills are an important part of communication. Good writing skills allow you to communicate your message with clarity and ease to a far larger audience than through face-to-face. Writing can be a better angle because it may be supportive aspect for a major extent of entities like

- Functioning over our emotional state
- Remaining optimistic
- Declaring our approaches more perceptibly
- Promoting our creation in the most appropriate way.

Improving writing skills through reading: Mostly, there are twofold effects that writers endorse to those who want to improve writing skills. They are writing and reading. Writing is apparent because it is said that “practice makes a man perfect.” But writing something we get to our mind always doesn’t sound so good. For this we need to read something useful. Reading introduces us to different patterns, additional expressions, other methods, and other varieties in writing. Prominently, it discloses us to writing which is the best way to improve ourselves.

A great deal of individuals crave to progress one’s writing skills, equally in terms of skill and individual progression. Functioning to accomplish that, a crucial element is frequently overlooked i.e., Reading. Belle Beth Cooper from societal in put facility discloses that, “it takes for you to become a more skilled reader—and in turn, a better writer.”

Reading both moral and immoral motivates us. It cultivates our appreciation for all the actions that authors have created in all these era’s. We can study from manuals almost their text expertise, then again there is no other way to find out for ourselves on how a writer grabs a technique. It only becomes a part of our research.

Ever since reading is what we have learnt in our schools since our childhood it is very easy to find out what we need to read before we write something. Illustrator Chuck Jones jugged out in how senseless it would be if we don’t read when we have the opportunity. Reading can be pure joy, if we are reading a good book. By that, It doesn’t mean good literature — It means anything that captures our imagination, that compels us to read more, that tells us a good story, that creates wonderful characters, that builds new creations. But beyond reading for pleasure, a good writer also reads with an eye for the writing. Maybe not all the time, but at least some of the time. And many times that writer doesn’t even realize he’s doing it. What we learn as readers, we use as writers. Maybe we don’t always do the best job at putting that knowledge to use, but that just takes practice. Over time, our writing becomes in some ways a compilation of all the things we’ve learned as readers, blended together in our own unique recipe.

Conclusion: Let us proceed some progressive ways to improve writing skills by shifting the way we read: While reading a book or some important article try to skip the unimportant stuff as it overfills your brain with unnecessary information because it may confuse you when you actually want something useful for your research. So try to overlook the unnecessary information and try to go for conclusion and try to absorb the necessary things and note them.

Create the reading habit. It can't be a matter of just reading a book and then forgetting about reading after the initial burst of enthusiasm for reading. It has to be a habit that you create and keep for life.

Carry your book with you. Always carry some books which are useful for your study and note down the important points you would like to take from your reading.

Read great writers Great writers doesn't mean only the greatest writers but the writers who inspire us a lot and also the great storytellers. You can read the books of the people who can write with humour, create great characters, meet your expectations, generate innovative creations for you to dwell. Also read the books of the writers who can teach you something.

Pay attention to what the writers do with words.

Ahead of the great things stated above, the writer fixes slight effects with words, in every single article and sentence and expression. A noble authors how is concentration to verses, the effects they create, how they spread with other words, turns and turns the sense. We have to understand precisely how a writer organises his, as it is the best way we can use this in our writings too.

Above all, enjoy your reading. Reading, obviously, is almost plentiful more than just wisdom, studying and testing. It's almost pleasure. So don't let your "Reading" in order to improve your writing skill safe ct your joy. Read for pleasure and if anything suits to your writing don't let it go .Make a note of it and use it in your writings.

References:

1. Mary Jaksch's-article on writing through reading,
2. Belle Beth Cooper's article on How to become a better writer
3. James Patterson's-Tips, Techniques and Exercising
4. [www2.le.ac.uk/departments/gradschool/training/..../study.../developing writing skills](http://www2.le.ac.uk/departments/gradschool/training/..../study.../developing writing skills)
5. [www.youtube.com/watch how to improve writing skills](http://www.youtube.com/watch how to improve writing skills).

***

M.RamaPriya/Research Scholar/ Dept. of English/ K L University/
Guntur/ AP/India/vamsipriya2005@gmail.com

Dr.K.V. Divya/ Associate Professor/ Dept. Of English/ K L University/Guntur/ AP/ India.